I support satellite radio's right to broadcast traffic and weather news. I travel frequently up the I-95 corridor and rely heavily on satellite radio traffic reports. Local stations do not offer a similar service or are unknown to me as I pass through their regions. In addition, satellite radio's service is superior to the local products, which are not broadcast frequently enough to do much good, and are interspersed with commercials. If I want to pay for this service, I should have the right to do so, and the satellite providers should have the right to offer the service. This is America, after all!
